

By the Queene,

Here the Quenes most excellent Maiestie hath lately concluded a mariage to the honour of almighty God, and the weale and benefite of her graces realmes and subiectes, with the moste hyghe and myghtye Prince, the Prince of Spayne: Her highnes considerynge the lightnes and euill disposition of diuerse lewde and sedicious persone, who sekyng alwayes nouelties, & beinge seldom contented with their presente state, might peraduenture at this time by their naughtie & disordred behauour attempt to stirre discorde, and gyue occasion to breake the good and frendly agreement, that ought to be nourished and continued betwene the subiectes of thys realme, and suche as shall come in wyth the sayde most noble Prince, hath thought good to signifie unto all her faythfull and louyng subiectes, that lyke as alredy ordre is taken, on the behalfe of the sayde moste noble Prince, that all suche, eyther of hys owne, or of anye other nation, as shall attende vpon hym selfe, or any of hys trayne, at theyz commyng hither, shall in their behauour vse themselfes honestly, frendly, and quietly towardes her highnes subiectes, of all sortes and degrees, without gryning anyz maner iuste occasion of trouble or discontentation to any person for that partes: even so doth her hyghnes streyghtly charge and commaundeth al and singuler her louyng subiectes, of what estate, degree, or condition soever they be, that they and euery of them do semblablye, for their partes, vse all suche straungers, as shall repayre hither, wyth, or to the sayde most noble Prince, or any of hys trayne, with curtoise, frendly, and gentle enterterynement, wythoute ministryng towardes them any maner cause of stryfe or contention, eyther by outwarde dedes, taunting, wordes, unseemely countenaunce, or by any other wayes or meanes, wherby lacke of frendeshyppe or good wyll myght be conceaued.

And further streyghtly chargeth and commaundeth all and singuler noble men & gentlemen, wythin thys her graces sayde realme, that they and euerye of them do eche one for hys part take suche ordre wyth their seruautes and others, attendiynge vpon them, and do gryne unto them suche streyght warning and charge, as neyther by themselfes, nor by anye other meanes they do presume to attempt eyther directly or indirectly, to breake this her highnes ordre and commaundement, or any wayes to trouble, disquiete, or gryne occasion of quarrell to any of the sayde most noble Princes trayne, vpon payne, that whosoeuer shall by wordes or dede neglecte thys her graces pleasure, or do contrary to the same, shall not only incurre her Maiesties highe displeasure and indignation, but also be committed to prison without bayle or maynprise, to abyde there suche further punyshment, eyther by syne or otherwyse, as shall be thought agreeable to the qualite of hys or their offences, and maye serue for an example to other lyke disordred personys.

God save the Quene.
